Initial presentation

An intersectional reading of gender equality policies in the Scandinavian context

Gender equality policies have been fundamental in the development of the Swedish welfare state, especially in the last four decades with the incorporation of women into the labor market. Various public policies have been implemented at the national and municipal levels to facilitate the work and family equation. Feminist research has analyzed these policies from two fundamental perspectives for the implementation of citizens' rights: a) from an intersectional perspective, exploring the effect of various social inequalities on gender equality policies and b) gender policies in the context of the presence of "anti-rights" actors within municipal and national institutions.

Speaker: Diana Mulinari