

In search of new ways to participate and intervene with an intersectional approach

The case of 'Schools for Equity and Diversity' Programme

Schools for Equality and Diversity is a programme of training, counseling and accompaniment in the public and concerted centers of the city of Barcelona, which pivots on three axes: sexual and gender affective diversity; diversity of origin, cultural and religious and functional diversity. It works to prevent the emergence of abusive, discriminatory and / or xenophobic attitudes and behaviors and to promote interpersonal relationships based on equality, equity and respect. It is aimed at children and adolescents aged 3 to 16, their immediate surroundings and their families. Currently 15 schools participate, and this year the intersectionality has played a key role.
